video-SALMONN-ol SFT:

- 1. The speaker is making a joke about how fast food restaurants started putting calorie counts on their menus.
- 2. He argues that this is a bad thing because it makes people feel guilty about eating large portions of unhealthy food.
- 3. He then says, 'I didn't need to know that,' implying that he doesn't like being reminded of the calorie count and feels like it's an unnecessary piece of information
- 4. Therefore, the answer is C. He doesn't like knowing calorie counts of food. (Misinterpretation) video-SALMONN-ol Process DPO:

- 1. The The speaker is making a joke about how fast food restaurants use calorie counts to manipulate customers into buying more food.
- 2. He says he didn't need to know that because he already knew he was going to eat a lot of calories.
- 3. His tone and delivery suggest he's not actually upset about the calorie count, but rather finds it humorous that he doesn't need to be told how unhealthy his choices are. (Combining audio-visual information)
- 4. Therefore, the speaker implies that when you want to eat, just eat and don't prioritize calories.
- 5. The answer is B
